

Problems and Principles in English Teaching

Christopher J. Brumfit

Pergamon Institute of English

Contents

Introduction	Page ix
PART ONE: SPECIFIC SITUATIONS
1. Classroom procedures	1
A problem-solving approach to the development of intensive reading	3
Correcting written work	3
2. Teaching syllabuses	9
Is literature language? or Is language literature?	14
Second language teaching in the secondary school— some principles	14
Literature teaching in Tanzania: the problem	28
3. Teacher training syllabuses	38
Is language linguistics? A note on the naming of courses	48
The role of the methodology component in the training of teachers of English as a Second or Foreign Language	51
The role of language study in teacher education	63
4. The language teaching profession	73
Education, ideology, and materials design: a Tanzanian experience	73
PART TWO: GENERAL PRINCIPLES	83
5. The model	85
The English language, ideology and international communication. Some issues arising out of English teaching for Chinese students	85
	vii

6. Current approaches	98
Notional syllabuses: a reassessment	98
Commonsense about ESP	106
'Communicative' language teaching: an assessment	110
Teaching pupils how to acquire language	122
7. The role of research	130
Some experimental investigations into language teaching methodology, and some of their limitations	130
8. The social realities	138
Professionalism and language teachers	138
Ode to the acronym	147
Conclusion	149
Bibliography	150
Acknowledgements	154
Index	155