

4492.

Towards an Interest-Free
Islamic Economic System

*The Islamic Foundation, U.K.
and*

The International Association for Islamic Economics, Islamabad

Contents

Acknowledgements	7
Foreword — Khurshid Ahmad	11
Preface	17
Chapter 1: Introduction	19
Chapter 2: Prohibition of Ribā in Islam and its Alternatives	23
Introduction	23
The Meaning of Ribā and its Prohibition in Islam	23
The Islamic Alternatives to Ribā	28
Conditions of Mudārabah	31
Some Comments	32
Chapter 3: Implications of Moving Towards an Interest-Free Islamic Economic System	35
Introduction	35
Assumptions, Basic Model and Results	36
Basic Model	37
Some Asymptotic Results	39
Fundamental Result	43
Critical Examination of Assumptions	46
Conclusion	51
Chapter 4: Informational Asymmetry, Monitoring, and Financial Contracts: A New Explanation for the Role of Debt in the Capital Structure of a Firm	53
Introduction	53
Role of Debt in the Capital Structure of a Firm: A Survey	54
Basic Problem and Results	57
The Model	59

Solution Under VRS	61
Solution Under FRS	63
Comparison of Two Schemes	64
Monitoring in the New Financial System	67
Conclusions	68

Chapter 5: Interest-Free Financial Intermediation: Theory and Practice

Chapter 5: Interest-Free Financial Intermediation: Theory and Practice	73
Introduction	73
An Islamic Model of Interest-Free Banking	73
Comments on the Model	80
Siddiqi's Model of Interest-Free Banking	80
Stability of Islamic Financial System: A Digression	82
A Note on the Problem of Moral Hazard	85
Risk Aversion in Siddiqi's Model	86
Uzair's Analysis	86
Islamic Scheme in the Agricultural Sector	88
The Problem of Consumer Credit	88
A Suggestion for Determining Profitability in Short-Term Financing	90
Interest-Free Financial Intermediation in Practice	90
An Islamic Financial Scheme Offered by Banker's Equity	93
Major Features of Participating Term Certificates (PTC)	94
PTC as an Islamic Scheme: A Critical Evaluation ..	96
Some Suggestions for Improvements in PTC Arrangements	100
Some Concluding Remarks	102
Conclusions and Direction for Future Research ...	103
Appendix 1	107
Appendix 2	115
Index	121