ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Customarily, in the front pages of a book, an author lists the people who have helped see the manuscript to completion. In this case, the list is more than customary. The names here are those of truly special people. They offered advice, references, experience, and wisdom. But most of all they offered time—in every case, their most precious commodity. To all, I extend my sincere appreciation, not just for what they did but for who they are: dear, kind professionals who are also my friends, especially Valda Alsop, William Asbury, Rick Barter, Viola Blaser, Robert Edelman, Rosemary Ewing, James Gardner, Dr. Virginia Grabill, Mary Lou Heeger, Dr. Ed Jenkinson, Athalene Klein, Joyce Marlin, Ninalea McIntosh, Jona Monahan, Rosemarie Norrick-Urash, Marcia Onnybecker, June Purcell, Ralph Rothert, John Russell, Jack Schriber, Sue Schriber, Dr. Ann Stuart, Edmund Sullivan, Virginia Thrasher, Sharon Tuggle, Dr. Laura Weaver, Susan Wolf, Jim Wootton, and many others who answered questions, offered opinions, made suggestions, and otherwise provided moral support.

Others agreed to allow their work to be included as models. A special thanks to those for their cooperation and willingness to help: Hillary Altekruze for her literary analysis, "Alone in a Crowded World: Emily Dickinson and Her Poems"; David Ciepley for his short story, "Spud"; Jo Ann McCulley for her literary analysis, "Chee and Old Man Fat: A Study in Contrast"; Karla Moore for her literary analysis, "Sylvia and the White Heron"; Jack B. Schriber for his poem, "Ode to a Tupperware Container"; Timothy L. Rife for his technical report, "Printed Circuits Versus Wire Wrapping"; Ann Commons Weil for her research paper, "Mother Goose: A Devoted Teacher"; and Jerome Welte for his laboratory report, "The Effects of Acid Rain on the Growth of Bulbous Plants."

Finally, a warm note of gratitude to Linda Bernbach, the editor who suggested the idea for this handbook, who has answered hours of long-distance questions, who has guided me through two previous projects, and whose exemplary professionalism should be a standard in the publishing industry. I hope she's awarded a hefty bonus when this book sells its first million copies!
