

Seventh Edition

Introduction
to TEACHING

A RANDOM HOUSE BOOK

to the teacher	vii
to the student	ix

1 the nature of teaching 3

science or art?	3
the guiding of learning	7
teaching skills	8
dynamic teaching	15
conclusion	17
on your own	18
additional references	19

2 those who teach 21

education of teachers	22
the employment of teachers	25
financial considerations	27
new teaching positions	32
personality factors	35
professional concerns	38
conclusion	40
on your own	40
additional references	41

3	those who learn	44
	individual characteristics	48
	classroom interaction	50
	emotional characteristics	59
	pupil behavior	57
	student development	61
	conclusion	67
	on your own	68
	additional references	69

4	society's schools	71
	historical development	72
	mass education	75
	control of public schools	77
	differences in schools	82
	basic role of the schools	90
	conclusion	91
	on your own	93
	additional references	94

5	the school society	97
	school administration	97
	the teacher society	103
	organizing pupils	104
	organization of schools	107
	the pupil society	113
	conclusion	117
	on your own	118
	additional references	119

6	what to learn	121
	the school curriculum	121
	construction of the curriculum	125
	sequence of the curriculum	133
	evaluation	143

conclusion	144
on your own	145
additional references	146

7 the process of learning 147

ability to learn	149
attitudes and learning	152
speed of learning	157
reinforcement in learning	158
learning goals	160
success and learning	165
theories of learning	170
conclusion	172
on your own	173
additional references	175

8 the organization of instruction 176

objectives of learning	176
planning relations with students	179
planning for instruction	181
classroom discipline	186
selection of content for instruction	190
evaluation	195
conclusion	203
on your own	203
additional references	206

9 the guidance of learning 207

motivational techniques	207
the textbook as a guide	210
teacher-centered techniques	212
pupil-centered techniques	216
instructional devices and media	218
innovations in instructional organization	228
conclusion	229

on your own 230
additional references 231

10 noninstructional roles 233

teacher as a model citizen 233 teacher as a faculty member 236 control of youngsters' behavior 240 classroom management 243 extracurricular activities 250 consultation with laymen 251 teacher evaluation 252
conclusion 254
on your own 255
additional references 256

11 facilitators of instruction 257

public support 257
school administration 263
instructional assistance 268
conclusion 275
on your own 276
additional references 278

12 philosophy and theory 280 philosophy and theory in society 280 philosophy and theory in education 285 base of current philosophy 290

conclusion 294
on your own 295
additional references 297

13 teaching as a profession 298

professional status 298 teacher organizations 302 increasing competencies 309

conclusion	312
on your own	312
additional references	313

14 the future 314

the student-teaching experience	314
obtaining a position	316
the first day of teaching	319 future control of schools	321
the teaching revolution	325
conclusion	328
on your own	329
additional references	330

bibliography	331
--------------	-----

index	345
-------	-----